Wisconsin News In Brief.

The late tax commission closed a two days' session at Madison, Opinions from several different men were listened to by the commission and Insurance Commissioner Fricke addressed the commission on the changes needed in taxing insurance companies. The commission will hold sessions in several cities of the state to give the business men chances of expressing opinions. The object of the commission is to investigate the taxing of personal property. This fall a report will be prepaeed and presented to the legislature with recommendatious for legislatian on the subject.

Frank C. Neuschaefer has secured a judgment in the Oshkosh court on a mortgage covering an estate operated by the late William Neuschaefer. After William's death, a young woman brought suit against the estate for $2,000 damages, claiming that under promise of marriage William had ruined her. The judgment on the mortgage will absorb the entire property belonging to William, and the young lady will be left out.

The Junior class of the State university had their ball last evening in the armory. The wife of the caterer claimed that she was choked by a student who sought to gain entrance by the door reserved especially for the caterer. The friends of the woman are stirred up over the affair, and will demand an investigation by the faculty.

G. W. Roe and A. E. Thompson of Oshkosh have brought suit to recover four years' interest from George Hilton. The plaintiff rented a building of the defendant for five years. He failed at the end of one year, and now the plaintiffs ask that the rent for the remaining four years of the contract be paid.

Phillip Harmon, Jr., of Galesville lost his farm house by fire Thursday night. Mr. Harmon was not at home and his wife was forced to leave the house so quick that she did not have time to dress and had to walk through the snow barefooted to a neighbor's.

The grocery and meat market at Oshkosh conducted by the Workmen's Co-operative company has been closed on an injunctional order obtained by J. E. Kennedy & Son, who claim that the company is insolvent.

Gov. Scofield went to Chicago today to see his son Paul, who has been in Colorado for his health. The Colorado climate has not helped him and he will go to Mexico accompanied by his brother George.

Ira Morehouse and William Krackal a couple of 13-year-old boys of Portage, were arrested at Madison Saturday on the charge of stealing a pocketbook. There was nothing suspicious looking about the boys and they were given their liberty.

The oratorical contest was held at the Oshkosh Normal school Friday evening. C. L. Lunak of Kewaunee took first honors and will represent the school at the state contest to be held in Platteville, March 18.

The case at West Superior of Buregard, the Indian charged with murdering Joseph Blackburn near Gordon, has been postponed to allow the defense to collect testimony. It will be heard next week.

THE SEASON OF FASTING HERE

Rules That Catholics Observe During the Penitential Period.

In the local Catholic churches yesterday were read the Lenten regulations which will govern the conduct of Roman Catholics during the coming penitential period beginning next Wednesday. They are as follows:

First—All the days of Lent, Sunday excepted, are fast days of obligation, on which but one full meal is allowed.

Second—The use of flesh meat is allowed, by apostolic dispensation, at the principal meal only, on all days except Wednesdays and Fridays, and also Saturday of the second or Ember week and of Holy week. (Those who are exempt from fasting may more than once partake of flesh meat on days not enjoining abstinence)

Third—The use of eggs, butter, milk, and cheese is by custom allowed throughout Lent, and also the use of lard instead of butter for cooking.

Fourth—Fish and flesh meat are not permitted at the same meal.

Fifth—A collation or repast may be taken in the evening, but it ought not exceed the fourth part of an ordinary meal; and a cup of coffee or tea with a little milk and a small slice of bread may be taken in the morning by those who need it.

IS RELIGION A FAILURE?

Jewish Rabbi Claims All Existing Creeds Are Deficient.

Milwaukee, Feb. 21—Quite a sensation was created in the congregation B'nai Jashurum on Saturday, by the radical utterances of Rabbi Joseph Leiser, of Springfield, Ill. He declared that in his opinion religion as expounded by the Jewish, Christian, Hindoo and Mohammedan systems, was not suited to the spirit of the present time, and was wrong in the elementary principles. Judiaism of today, he said, should recognize Christ as the great reformer, and expressed the hope that all Jews would realize this fact, and embrace the new religion. In the course of his remarks he said that the rabbis of old had accomplished nothing in the way of uplifting mankind, except to leave a few Talmudic books and writings. The religion as expounded by the younger element was the religion of the future, which would lead to the recognition of man as a unit.

PASSIVE SONS OF HERMAN

They May Fow Receive the Full Benefits of the Order

Milwaukee, Feb. 21—The Wisconsin Grand Lodge Sons of Herman, in session here, has adopted modifications in the assessment system for life insurance which, it is believed, will result in attracting to the order many young men. It was decided that lodges may admit passive members, entitled only to sick benefits but may join the insurance class at any time subject to prescribed conditions. Passive members have no vote in the grand lodge and are not eligible for offices. Members may join the $500 or $1,000 insurance class. Death benefits will hereafter be paid within ninety days of the date of death.

KILLED THE MAYOR OF BUNKER HILL

EDITOR HEDLEY IS ON TRIAL AT CARLINVILLE, ILL.

He Was Jealous of the Official's Attentions to a Young Lady—A Feud of Long Standing Is Brought to a Tragic Close.

Carlinville, Ill., Feb. 21—[Special] The trial of Captain Hedley for killing Mayor Richardson, of Bunker Hill, was begun today. Captain Hedley was editor of the Bunker Hill Gazette. John R. Richardson was mayor of the town, and supposedly worth a million. They both figured prominently in the affairs of the town, and the politics of the southern part of the state. They both claimed the exclusive and undivided attention to a young lady who sang in a choir. They hated each other with consistency and determination. They rarely met in the public street that the spectators did not expect to witness a conflict. The crisis of this hatred came at last. They met in front of the postoffice Saturday noon, June 12, 1897. A few moments later a crowd which had been watching the two men talking in an excited manner saw a revolver in Hedley's hand. He fired once, but missed. The second shot tore through Richardson's lungs and he fell mortally wounded. Eminent surgeons were brought from St. Louis on special trains, but nothing could be done for the dying man.

Hedley was immediately placed under arrest, and to prevent anticipated mob violence he was taken to Carlinville.

It developed after the murder that both men were interested in Miss Ella Brown Hedldy was a married man and he claimed that his attentions to the young woman were only of a platonic nature. It was well known that Richardson loved Miss Brown and asked her to become his wife. Hedley, it is said, asked her to request Richardson to cease paying his attentions to her. This is said to be at the bottom of the tragedy. It is also known that Richards chided Hedley for paying such marked attentions to the young woman.

Richardson was a giant physically, while Hedley is a mere pigmy. The Mayor was a bachelor and had come from St. Lokis to Bunker Hill.

NOTABLE WEDDING AT ORFORD

Many Guests Attended From Abroad and Presents Were Numerous.

At the Orfordville home of the bride's mother Saturday evening at 8:30 o'clock was celebrated the wedding of Miss Bessie Onegaard and John F. Greenwood. Following the ceremony the usual wedding feast was in order after which the guests received the numerous and handsome presents.

The bride is one of Orford's most popular and highly esteemed young ladies, while the groom is a resident of Beloit, where he is held in the highest esteem. The following persons from Beloit were present at the wedding: Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Bemis, Edwin A. Greenwood and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Greenwood, C. O. Hollister and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. Conkling, Miss Ripley, Mr. McPherson and family, Mr. Peterson and family.

JEFFRIS' HORSE BADLY CUT

Terribly Hurt by Falling on a Plank, But Will Live.

A horse belonging to David Jeffris is now in Dr. O. D. Roberts' hospital, suffering from a three foot wound made by a board on which the animal accidentally fell. The accident took place in the stable, and was the result of the horse trying to jump over the stall partition. The board made an ugly wound, running from near the hind legs upward between the outside hide and ribs, within a few inches of the spine. The animal will recover.

TEMPLARS MOURN HER DEATH

Pass Resolutions On the Demise of Frances E. Willard.

The local lodge of Good Templars have passed resolutions on the death of the late Frances E. Willard. These resolutions have been placed in the hands of a special committee consisting of Mrs. G. D. Stratton, J. A. Caniff, and F. A. Humphrey, whose duty it will be to send the same to the W. C. T. U. in Chicago. The Good Templars have received many compliments on their prompt action in the matter.

EIGHT MORE SYRIANS HERE

They Are All Men From La Crosse Who Are Peddlers

Eight copper faced, black eyed Syrians arrived in the city this morning from La Crosse. The little band was composed entirely of men and the object of their visit here is to thoroughly cover Rock county as only peddlers of trinkets can. They report that a Syrian colony of about seventy-five people reside in La Crosse, and that several of them have relatives in this city.

The Storm in ChicaUo.

Chicago, Feb. 21—[Special]—The snow storm continues unabated. The street cars and steam railway service are badly crippled.

ENGLAND WILL AID THE UNITED STATES

LONDON PAPERS DENOUNCE SPAIN'S COURSE.

Assert That War Is Inevitable and That They Must Side With Uncle Sam—Great Activity at the Navy Yards—Inquiring Into the Maine's Calamity.

London, Feb. 21—[Special]—The English papers continue to discuss the Maine horror, and express the opinion that if Spain and the United States engage in war and other nations come to Spain's assistance, England will help the United States.

War Thought To Be Inevitable.

Washington, Feb. 21—[Special]—From a high diplomatic source it is learned that representatives of three leading foreign nations have advised their governments that war between Spain and the United States is inevitable, and that open hostilities cannot be delayed longer than two weeks.

More Divers Needed

Washington, Feb. 21—[Special]—Several reports came by telegraph to the state and navy departments today from Havana. All of the naval telegrams bore date of yesterday, while that from Gen. Lee to the state department was probably sent late last night though marked this morning. Gen. Lee's dispatch was as follows:

"Havana, Feb. 21—Assistant secretary of state, Washington:—Great need of divers to get the facts and bodies from the wreck. Two are now employed, but twelve or fifteen could be used. One hundred and forty-three bodies have been buried. Very few were found today, but over 100 are supposed to be confined in the ship The sailors now in the two Spanish hospitals number eleven. Visited them yesterday. All will recover except two. They are comfortable and well cared for. (Signed) Lee."

Invistigating the Maine Disaster.

Havana, Feb. 21—[Special]—The work of investigating the Main disaster will go steadily forward from today. The board of inquiry will arrive this afternoon and will begin work immediately. After a personal examination of the wreck the board will take the testimony of Sigsbee and other survivors. The reports that the United States intends to send another warship here cause uneasiness, and rabid Spaniards threaten trouble.

It is now an established fact that Havana harbor is filled with submarine mines and torpedoes.

Overruled By the Spaniards

Newport News, Va., Feb. 21—[Special]—A letter received here states that Captain Sigabee objects to the position in the harbor picked for the Maine by the Spanish authorities, but the Spaniards insisted on the Maine's occupying the spot which proved so fatal to the vessel.

A Spanish Emissary Hanged

Pinar Del Rio, Cuba, Feb. 21—[Special]—Augusto Morales, a Spanish emissary, was hanged last week by order of the Cuban general Diaz. Morales was caught with a letter offering bribes to Cubans to surrender on his person.

A Silly Yarn

Madrid, Feb. 21—[Special]—Papers here publish the story that a New York Journal representative blew up the Maine in order to create a disturbance. It also says the proprietor of the Journal bet $100,000 that he could provoke a war.

All Quiet at Havana

Tampa, Fla., Feb. 21—[Special]—The steamship Olivette from Havana denies the report that explosions were heard in Havana shortly after the Olivette sailed. It says all is quiet there.

Bomb Explosion.

Havana, Feb. 21—[Special]—A bomb exploided in Frijaea theatre last last night during the progress of the masked ball. Four persons were injured. The perpetrator is unknown.

Bodies Still Unburied.

Washington, Feb. 21—[Special]—A cable from Havana this morning says a hundred and forty-three bodies are still unburied, Over a hundred are supposed to be confined in the ship.

The President Is Tranquil.

Washington, Feb. 21—President McKinley left for Philadelphia today to deliver an address before the university of Pennsylvania. This is taken to inniicate that the president does not think the situation critical.

Advises Moderation

New York, Feb. 21.—[Special]—Copies of the Madrid Heraldo just received contain articles advocating calm meditation of the Cuban-American situation, as a critical moment has been reached.

A Bare Assertion

The Evening Journal's Havana correspondent asserts positively a great hole was blown inwardly in the bottom of the Maine. He fails, however, to give conclusive evidence.

Activity at the Navy Yard

Philadelphia, Feb. 21—[Special]—The activity in the various departments of the navy yards is becoming noticeable. All fighting boats are being overhauled.

Preparing for Emergencies

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 21—[Special]—Work on the Monitors Puritan and Terror and the torpedo boats Foote and Kinslow is being pushed with the utmost vigor.

Has Faith In American Honor

The guard was withdrawn from the Vizcaya this morning, the captain declaring he had full faith in the honor of the American people.

SCHOOLS HONOR WASHINGTON

Birthday of the Father of His Country Duly Observed.

Appropriate exercises to Washington's birthday were held in the city schools today. Although his birthday is not due until tomorrow, exercises of an instructive and interesting nature were held today, for tomorrow the pupils and teachers will be given a holiday. Patrons and parents were especially invited to be present this year, and many availed themselves of the opportunity.

The courts and the local banks will also be closed tomorrow.

Talents Worth Using.

"I have understood," said the friendly critic, unfolding a voluminous manuscript, "that poets have a shrinking nature."

"I can testify to the truth of that," replied the bard.

"Well, I don't want to impose on friendship. But it would be a great favor if you would shrink this up into about four stanzas before making me read it."—Washington Star.

It Went Out Again.

Of course neither knew how it happened, but the light suddenly went out. She gave a frightened little cry and struck a match.

"I was afraid you were going to kiss me," she said.

"I was," he replied.

Afterward she explained that she never could keep a match lit, anyway.—Chicago Post.

A Wife Rebuked.

She—You read your political paper and I read my fashion journal. I don't see why you object to what I read.

He—There is a great difference. There is no additional expense when I read my paper, but as soon as you read your paper you make a break for some millinery store, and there is no end to the expense.—Tammany Times.

Wasted Philanthropy.

"What did she give you?" asked Mosely Wraggs, who was waiting around the corner of the house.

"She offered me a glass of water and a night shirt," answered Tuffold Knut, his rugged face turning brindle colored with indignation and disgust.—Chicago Tribune.

Why She Left.

Lady (interviewing housemaid)—Why did you leave your last place?

Housemaid — Because the master kissed me, mum.

Lady—And you didn't like it, eh?

Housemaid—Oh, I didn't mind it, mum, but the mistress didn't like it.—Tit-Bits.

The Greater Joy.

"Heavens!" cried the head of the firm, putting his hand to his ears as he entered the candy department. "Who gave those girls permission to talk?"

"I did sir," said the floorwalker. "It was the only way to keep them from eating up all the candy."—San Francisco Examiner.

THE Concordia masquerade occurs tonight.

MILLIONS CONSUMED BY RECENT FIRES

NEW DOCKS AND CUSTOM HOUSE AT TAMPICO BURNED

Total Loss Will Probably Reach Two Million Dollars—Forest Flames In South Carolina Kill Many Cattle—A Big Blaze In St. Louis.

Tampico, Mexico, Feb. 21—[Special]—The new wharf under construction burned yesterday. It was intended to be the finest on the continent. The new custom house was also damaged to the extent of eight thousand dollars. Total loss on wharf, custom house and merchandise, $2,000,000.

St. Louis, Feb. 21—[Special]—Niedringhaus' house furnishing goods establishment was damaged $50,000 worth by fire this morning.

Columbia, S. C., Feb. 21—[Special]—Great forest fires are raging in several counties of this state. More than a million acres have been fire swept. Four persons are known to have burned to death, and it is feared others have met the same fate. Many cattle have perished.

A WOMAN DEBATER.

She Vanquished Her Young Men Opponents at Cornell College.

The many friends of Miss Abigail Hill Laughlin of Portland, Me., were much elated when they received word that she won the first prize in the great debating contest held at Cornell university recently.

The question, which was a most interesting and very timely one, was:

Resolved, That immigration into the United States should be restricted to persons who can read and write the United States constitution in some language, except that satisfactory provisions should be made for admitting those dependent upon qualified immigrants.

ABIGAIL HILL LAUGHLIN.

Miss Laughlin took the negative side of the question, and, opposed by the pick of the college young men, won. Her arguments were most convincing, and her whole address showed a careful study of facts in the case. This was the fourth annual debating contest for the 1894 memorial prize. Miss Laughlin is the first pupil of the young lady students at Cornell that has ever participated in a debate.

Miss Laughlin resides in Portland and is the youngest daughter of Mrs. Bessie P. Laughlin. Miss Laughlin was born in Robbinston, but removed to Portland when a young girl. Always a brilliant scholar, she was the salutatorian in the class which was graduated from the Portland high school in 1886 and was awarded the first medal always given to the pupil who attains the highest rank in scholarship during the term of four years.

Miss Laughlin graduated from Wellesley college in 1894 and is now a student in the Law school at Cornell and is preparing to be admitted to the New York bar.

She was one of the founders of Agora, which is a well known literary club at Wellesley, and was its president during the first three years of its organization. —Boston Journal.

Dressing the Hair.

Everybody who is anybody nowadays wears her hair pompadour. It is made to stand up in front and out at the sides, no matter whether the owner's face is round, square, oblong or triangular, and the only way to keep it in place, the hair, not the face, for that's another story, is to use a pompadour comb. All women who own up to being 30 will remember how as children they longed for a roach comb. The child who succeeded in getting one became a marked child and was considered one of fortune's favored. If any little girl broke her roach comb, word went around the neighborhood, and the other little girls talked about it for days and dated everything from "the day Susie James broke her red coral roach comb" or "Mamie Brown snapped her shell one in two pieces." The pompadour comb is nothing more or less than a roach comb for grown up children. It is worn backward, however, with the teeth toward the front, and for the purpose of holding the billows of high waves in place, whereas the old fashioned roach comb was worn by the children of a generation ago to hold in subjection hair made as slick as plenty of water and plenty of brushing could make it. The newest pompadour combs have teeth rather far apart. The prettiest ones are of amber or shell and are handsomely jeweled with mock gems. Some are mounted in silver or gold, and others are embellished with a row of brilliants.—New York Sun.

TWO PASTORS TALK TO THEIR FLOCKS

SUNDAY SERMONS IN LOCAL CHURCHES.

Rev. A. C Kempton Speaks of "Gentleness, and Force of Character" at the Baptist Church—Rev. W. A. Hall's Address at the Court Street M. E. Sanctuary.

Rev. W. A. Hall, of the Court Street Methodist Episcopal church yesterday preached from the text, "Do This in Remembrance of Me." He said in part: In a severe storm a vessel is being driven furiously. In the darkness of a very black night it strikes upon the rocks off the shore of a desolate island and is soon pounded to pieces by the mighty trip hammers of the ponderous surf. A few of the crew and passengers reach the shore. The next day they find a cask part full of fresh water and some food washed ashore. As the island appears barren they put themselves on half rations They divide themselves into s arc parties that reach out in different directions over the island like the fingers of a hand. The most careful search reveals the fact that the island is destitute of all life. No spring of water is to be found. What a barren waste! One day when food and drink are very nearly exhausted they see in the distance the white sails of a ship. The hull of the vessel is below the horizon. They are in a frenzy of alternate anxiety and hope. Will it depart and leave them, or will it come to their rescue? They hoist a signal of distress, leap and call frantically, and now the blue smoke from a fire lifts itself high toward the horizon. Surely it must come to their relief; but no; it goes on, on, on; and at last it is out of sight. Their despair is bitter, intense. And now the food fails, the water is exhausted, they are simply awaiting death. Frames emaciated, eyes protruding, tongues swollen and cracked by the fever of an insufferable thirst; their condition is utterly desperate. One day a man lifts himself weakly to a sitting posture, shades his eyes with his hand and looks out over the sea. "Is it? Can it be possible?" he says. Others are looking. Just where the blue is almost white, where sea and sky seem to mingle, is the faintest tracing that grows into something nearer distinctness. Yes, it is smoke. The line deepens. At last a speck appears under it and grows. It is a steamship. The men look, wonder. Oh, will it come? Yes; it comes nearer and nearer. And now it rides majestic in the offing. The joy is almost too much for those almost dead men. Boats are lowered. Sailors are ashore, Tenderly those men are borne abroad. The ship puts out to sea. With the best of food, and the best of care, they are homeward bound. Loved ones greet them at the wharf. At last home walls and home scenes surround them. Their afflictions are over. Now the government fitted out that expedition at a very great cost. And those rescued are asked to set apart the day of their rescue, lift the flag and tell of what their country did for them. What think you? Would they refuse? Would they say "It is too much?" or "It is too little; it doesn't mean anything." No; little or much they would do it.

Your condition was greatly more desperate. You could do nothing for yourself. No one else could save you. Then Christ at the cost of his own life saved you. He instituted the Lord's supper. He said, "Do this in remembrance of me." Shall we say "It is too much," or "It is too little?" We will simply do as he tells us, because he tells us to do it, and because we want to please him.

A woman carries a locket. Sometimes she opens it; looks at it. It contains the picture of one who for twenty years was united to her in the very closest relations. As she looks at the picture, she sees one she loved again. Old scenes come up This service is a locket. As you eat the bread and drink the wine, Christ stands before you. Christ who loved you. His love becomes real as he himself stands out before vividly on the cross. You partake of his atonement over again.

The Baptist Church

In spite of the storm there was a goodly number at the morning service. Mr. Kempton's subject was, "The Power of Gentleness." The text was in Matt. 5-5 and Luke 23-24.

One text of scripture often illustrates another. The fact of Christ's gentleness spoken of and illustrated in these texts, proves his divinity. The original meaning of the word gentleness was one of noble blood. It has a wider and better meaning now. It is not popular now, as the golden rule is not popular. Men think more of strength and power than of being gentle.

To be gentle requires strength and power. Men thought that Jesus was weak and powerless. It was his love for man, his strength and power of character that made him deny himself and suffer on the cross for us.

Before his crucifixion a Jewish mob cried, "crucify him;" and 3,000 of that same mob were afterwards won by his gentleness and joined the church in one day. Gentleness is power; some men lack force and gentleness. They are to be pitied. Some have plenty of force but no gentleness. They are to be pitied also because of their brutality and wrong doing. They are not of much use in the world. Others have gentleness without any force. These go to the other extreme.

The greatest people are those who have both force and gentleness of character. Lincoln was an illustration of gentleness and force. Lincoln was an illustration of this class of men. He was both gentle and forceful.—an evenly balanced man. Jesus Christ was the only perfect illustrtion of gentleness and force. He could drive out the moneychangers and he could weep with those who were in sorrow and bereavement. Gentleness will do what force cannot do. We need Christ's character; let us follow him in all things.

There were a few who braved the terrible storm in the evening and attended the Young People's meeting. After th t Mr. Kempton gave a very interesting talk upon the life and death of Miss Frances E Willard

Firearms Are Not Toys.

Two more deaths have lately resulted from "didn't know it was loaded" accidents—a mother killing her babe and a boy almost having his head blown off. Revolvers and guns are dangerous under all circumstances. Firearms are not toys. It is almost unsafe to trifle with what are termed minor ailments. Insignificant though they seem at first, they are likely, if precautions against their further development are neglected, or they are unwisely treated, to develop into maladies of dangerous and complex magnitude. The best way is to arrest their progress at the start with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks constipation, liver complaint and rheumatism, malarial kidney trouble and nervousness. A decline in health is something we cannot afford to disregard. Nature always exacts a severe penalty for continuous heedlessness of her warning. Independently of its sterling efficacy as a specific for chronic maladies, the Bitters is a superb tonic and promoter of appetite and sleeps.

SELF APPOINTED POLICEMAN

Young Man Is Laboring Under a Queer Delusion.

Ralph Vincent, who resides on South Main street, is laboring under the delusion that Mayor Thoroughgood has appointed him as special policeman and that as such it is his duty to arrest no one but drunks. On several occasions of late Vincent has appeared at the jail with prisoners on hand, but each time they were released by Sheriff Acheson as soon as the facts were made known. The last two arrests Vincent made were of highly respected citizens whose only fault is their love for liquor. The police say they will look into Vincent's case.

IT does not seem to be generally understood that the public library is open every Saturday morning from 9:30 to 12 and during the afternoon and evening. This rule has been in effect since September last, but so few have availed themselves of its privileges that it will soon be revoked, unless a greater demand is made for its continuance.

PLUMBERS WIN THEIR SUIT

Decision In Milwaukee Means Much To Local Plumbers

Local plumbers are happy over the knocking out of the plumbers' law in the superior court at Milwaukee. Judge Sutherland has handed down his decision knocking out the plumber's license law, passed at the last session of the legislature, and which caused a severe blow to many master plumbers and many trades. The case decided, was a test one, that of Jacob Winkler against the board of public works of Milwaukee. Winkler failed to pass the examination held by the board of examiners, and was consequently refused a license. He brought suit on the ground the law was invalid. The case will doubtless be carried to the supreme court.

UNITE GREEN BAY BARBERS

M. H. Whittaker Was Busy Today In Forming the Union

M. H. Whittaker, of this city, as state president of the Barber's association, spent the day in Green Bay for the purpose of organizing a barber's union. This evening the organization will be perfected in Cooper's union rooms where officers will be elected for the ensuing year. Lawrence Fleming, secretary of the Trades Council at Green Bay, has been largely instrumental in bringing the barbers of Green Bay together and it is expected that one of the strongest barber's unions in the state will be the outcome of his labors.

SAD WAR QUARRELS.

WAR must, as a matter of course, engender many bitter personal quarrels, for human nature is the same everywhere. Considerations of patriotism, discipline and even charity conceal their most aggravated features until the danger of harm is over. The Ames-Curtis quarrel, which nearly led to a personal collision 32 years after the battle of Fort Fisher, was not simply a misunderstanding over history as some one else wrote it. The seeds were laid before the battle of Fort Fisher, and any affair in which the two actors in the quarrel were conspicuous would have led to trouble.

It is doubtful whether Generals Longstreet and Stonewall Jackson would have served longer in the same army had Jackson lived. Longstreet had been detached before Chancellorsville. He said that he saved Jackson from destruction at Second Bull Run and got no thanks for it and that it was more than Jackson had done for him in a similar crisis. He thought Jackson's Harper's Ferry affair a sort of fool business and that his reputation was built up by newspaper booming. There would not long have been room in the same army for men so opposite in temper and methods. And there is a mystery still over the changes in Lee's corps commanders after the battle of the Wilderness. Longstreet and A. P. Hill never seemed to occupy the same relative position that they had before, while Jubal Early and Ewell were given every chance. History tells how they used their opportunities.

A strain of bad blood lingering between generals is fatal to the effectiveness of the army, and while violence, especially in the form of assassination, is deplorable, a cause is served by such sudden outbreaks as that between General William Nelson and Jeff C. Davis during the Confederate invasion of Kentucky in 1862. Nelson had been sent into Kentucky to organize Federal forces for the defense of the state, to foster Union sentiment, and, in fact, to do anything and everything to save Kentucky. Davis reported to him for duty and was assigned to the defense of Louisville. To Nelson's mind Davis was not as active as he might have been. On calling him to account he was met with a spirit of insubordination, and Davis was ordered to leave the city. About that time there was a change in the commander of the department which enabled Davis to return to Louisville with sanction higher than Nelson's.

Sustained by several personal friends, among them a western governor, Davis sought Nelson, and, meeting him in the Galt House, forced a quarrel, which Nelson tried to avoid. When blood was up on both sides, a partisan of Davis handed him a pistol, with which he shot Nelson fatally. Davis was never tried and served faithfully to the end of the war.

It is easy to see how incalculable injury might result from personal quarrels between generals. It is not human nature to believe that Davis would have worked heart and soul to give Nelson a victory after that first tilt. Honorable men boldly state their differences and are separated in command, so that the service will not be the loser. It was a common thing to make changes of command on both sides during the war in order to avoid evil results from personal feeling. Hooker in the northern army and Bragg in the southern were marked men in respect to the confidence and devotion of their subordinates. Neither had the confidence of his army, and it was marvelous that the feeling did not end in open rupture in each case.

In one instance in the Confederate army in the west a war quarrel was settled by an appeal to the code, surely a more manly way than the one adopted by General Jeff C. Davis in the affair with Nelson. This quarrel grew out of a battle. In the defense of Little Rock in 1863 the Confederate cavalry was led by General Lucius M. Walker, under whom General J. S. Marmaduke commanded a division. After the battle Marmaduke asked that his division be attached to another corps. Walker took offense and said Marmaduke's request must be explained, for it cast an imputation upon his (Walker's) courage. Marmaduke responded that he had never accused Walker of cowardice, but that he would not longer serve under him.

When Walker found that Marmaduke not only would not explain but aggravated the original offense, he sent him a challenge and the pair met at 6 o'clock on the morning of Sept. 6, at a farm near Little Rock. The weapons were colt's navy revolvers, with a load in every barrel. Taking position 15 paces apart, the duelists prepared to shoot, until disabled or satisfied, with those terribly murderous weapons. Two shots were fired simultaneously without effect. At the second fire Walker fell mortally wounded and died next day.

During the Revolution there were several military duels, but the causes were of a strictly personal nature. Disputes were taken up vicariously, as that of Charles Lee and Washington by the gallant Laurens. If the same course had been in vogue during the civil war. there would have been duels by the score. There were many hot words spoken in the army over the McClellan, Pope. Burnside and Hooker episodes, but never an open rupture. It was charged that Fitz John Porter virtually turned traitor rather than sustain Pope at the Second Bull Run, but impartial investigation proved that he had actually done zealous work not called for by his orders and had obeyed orders to the letter and saved Pope's army.

McClellan's removal and Burnside's appointment, coming in the way they did, caused bitter feeling in all ranks, but Burnside himself had protested against his own appointment and acted so chivalrously throughout that while the other generals had no confidence in him as the successor of McClellan they sustained him most loyally when it came to battle. General Franklin, who commanded the left wing of the Army of the Potomac at the battle of Fredericksburg, was made a scapegoat for the horrible disaster to the army on that field, but Burnside had said to him after the battle, "Franklin, you held up my hands that day."

All the troops and the generals admired Burnside and felt for him in his situation, but when he was succeeded by Joe Hooker patience and sentiment had been exhausted. The act seemed a direct slap in the face. Fortunately before that came some of the leading generals had been relieved, among them Franklin. Franklin has made no secret of the fact that he would never have served under Hooker. Had he been forced to say so as bluntly as Marmaduke did of Walker the quarrel would not have been confined to Franklin and Hooker.

After Chancellorsville the commanders were not chary about letting Hooker and the administration know their views of Hooker. General Couch, the commander of the Second corps, a very able soldier and splendid man, was naturally the representative of the protesting leaders. He said boldly that he would no longer serve under Hooker, and Hooker, instead of taking umbrage, begged him to remain in the army. He then stated that he would serve under Meade, who was his inferior in rank, but this was not until the command had been offered to himself and firmly refused.

Between Sickles and Meade there was eternal war, so to speak, and it is no wonder that they came to two ways of thinking in the crisis at Gettysburg. Meade said to Sickles when he reported the enemy as active on the front, "Oh, you volunteers are always looking for attack!"

Sickles looked upon Meade as a military pedagogue whose true place was in a cloister teaching milksops the theories of war. Perhaps the country lost nothing and risked little when these two generals had its destinies in their hands, but who shall say? Meade and Slocum, commander of the right wing at Gettysburg, also had a misunderstanding on that field, and Meade was compelled or constrained to make amends officially for statements in his first reports. Slocum was transferred to the west after Gettysburg, and Sickles also left the Army of the Potomac. But Meade's quarrels with subordinates did not end. He removed General Doubleday from command on the field at Gettysburg. Soon after the army started on its campaign toward Richmond in 1864 Meade stirred up the Irish in Phil Sheridan, a newcomer from the west, and thereafter these two were two, not one, as commander and lieutenant should be. Sheridan took his orders from Grant after Meade set him to the task of wagon guards with his splendid 10,000 fighting horsemen. Burnside and Meade were always at variance and the gallant leader of the Ninth corps was finally driven from the army by the conduct of its irascible commander.

Hancock was about the only great soldier in the east that Meade did not quarrel with. But the "Superb" was a man of the mold that wins the trust and respect of every one, and besides it was a saying among his men that his hand was always on the butt of his revolver, no matter who he was treating with.

The last great quarrel in the Army of the Potomac was between Sheridan and General G. K. Warren, commander of the Fifth army corps. When this sad misunderstanding occurred, Sheridan was in command of the forces sent out by Grant to turn Lee's flank at Petersburg. Warren was there with his Fifth corps. Next to Hancock, Warren was the favorite with the old troops of the Army of the Potomac. He had been with that army from the beginning as a regimental, brigade, division and corps leader. He was the savior of Little Round Top at Gettysburg and had headed in person some of the most brilliant charges of the campaign to Richmond, a place the generals, as a rule, did not rush into. At Five Forks Warren held the post of honor with his division, charged the Confederate line and turned it, giving Sheridan's cavalry little to do but to ride over deserted intrenchments. But Sheridan ended the day by peremptorily removing him from the corps he had led so gallantly during the days of blood from the Wilderness onward and with which he had won the final victory. The injustice killed Warren. A court of inquiry cleared him of all taint in the matter—in fact, crowned him as the hero of the day. But Sheridan refused to recall his act. He had done it and it must stand. Right or wrong he had the power and use it he would and did to crush a fellow soldier of longer and more signal battle service that he himself could boast.

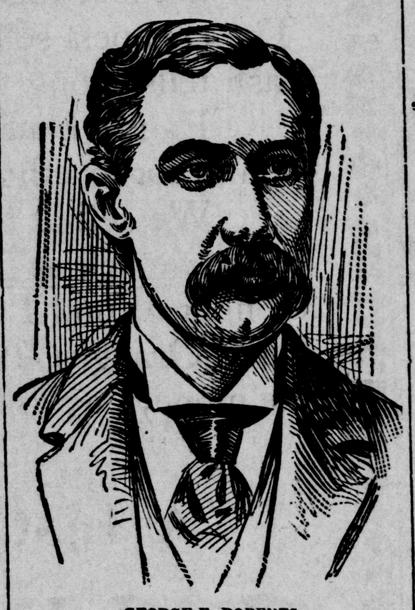

GEORGE L. KILMER.

BOSS OF THE MINT.

Mr. Roberts, the New Director, Earned the Office With His Pen.

George E. Roberts, the newly appointed director of the mint, earned the office with his pen. He is a resident of Fort Dodge, Ia., where he is editor and proprietor of a newspaper. He is a noted writer on economics and financial topics, being an advocate of the single standard, but believing in the possibility of an international bimetallism.

Mr. Roberts won a national reputation during the last presidential campaign by his reply to Harvey's "Coin's Financial School," and more than 150,000 copies of his book were bought by the people. His series of articles on money and economics, published soon after, attracted widespread attention. He has occupied prominent public positions in Iowa and has been a political leader in the state for several years. He was mentioned as a candidate for governor last year. He has been a faithful servant and friend of the Republican party, and few men are more popular in the political world of Iowa. The only office which he has held was that of state printer.

Mr. Roberts began his career in Fort Dodge as a printer in the office of the Fort Dodge Messenger. Before he had arrived at his majority he was part owner of the plant, and a few years afterward became its sole owner.

Mr. Roberts is about 46 years of age. He is a native of Galena, Ills., but removed to Fort Dodge many years ago. He has a family and is said to be of affable manners. His appointment was entirely unsolicited by him.

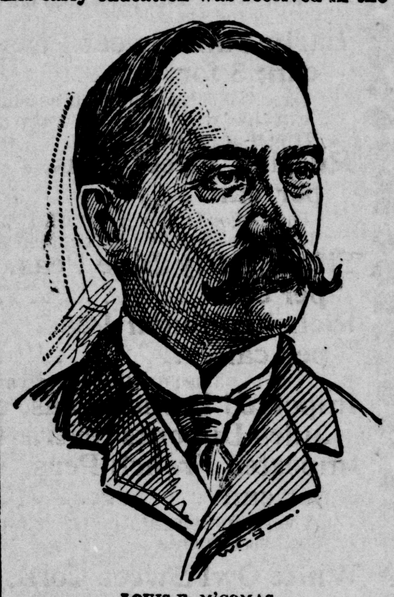

Mr. Preston, the retiring director, has been connected with the treasury department for over 42 years, and during all of the last administration was not only director of the mint, but was relied upon to furnish the president with arguments and statistics as to the relative production and proper use of gold and silver. His reports it is said, were quoted more extensively during the last campaign than any other government publication, and while men of course differed as to his theories they seldom questioned his facts.

GORMAN'S SUCCESSOR.

Career of Judge McComas, the Senator Elect From Maryland.

Judge Louis Emory McComas, who has been elected United States senator from Maryland to succeed Senator Gorman, has been for years a prominent Republican. In 1892, before he was elevated to the bench of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, he served as secretary of the Republican national committee, and his appointment was in a certain sense a reward for his services in behalf of President Harrison, who had long been his personal friend. He will not take his seat in the senate until March 4, 1899, when Senator Gorman's term expires.

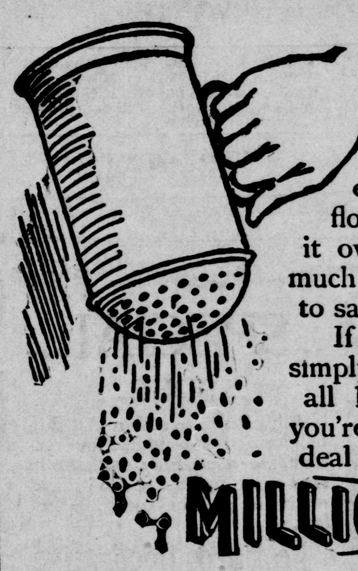

Judge McComas was born in Washington county, Md., on Oct 28, 1846. His early education was received in the schools of Williamsport. He was a student at St. James' college and was graduated from Dickinson college in 1866. He began the practice of law in 1868, having studied with R. H. Alvey, now chief justice of the court of appeals of the District of Columbia. In 1876 he was the Republican candidate for the Forty-fifth congress from the Sixth district and was defeated by 14 votes. He was elected to the Forty-eighth congress and for three successive terms thereafter. In 1890 he again met defeat. In his judicial as well as his legislative career Judge McComas has earned high praise.

The senator elect is a good looking, affable man, who is nevertheless something of an aristocrat. He comes from an old Revolutionary family, and his wife belongs to one of the oldest and most prominent families in western Maryland.

A good idea is to keep some Pearline in a sifter, ready to use for floor-washing, dish-washing, etc., etc. You sprinkle a little over the floor, for instance, and then just wash it over with a wet cloth. See how much more convenient to use than soap, to say nothing of the easier work!

If you're buying and using Pearline simply for washing clothes, and not for all kinds of washing and cleaning, you're cheating yourself out of a great deal of comfort and economy. 547

POSTAL BANK LUNACY.

After Uncle Sam opens postal banks, he could start up a postal clothing store, a postal dry goods store, a postal shoe store, a postal grocery store, a postal drug store, a postal meat market, provide a postal doctor, a postal dentist, and a postal veterinary surgeon. A small extention of the system would enable him to have postal farms, add postal factories. He could open a big department store and manufacturing plant, making and selling everything under the sun at cost. Then the American people would roll in clover. They would all be working for the government, and buying their goods at the government's "company store." Money would not be needed but "scrip" would answer all purposes. The United States would become a "co-operative commonwealth," and joy would be unconfined—from a Debsonian standpoint.

Running a bank is a business, and Tom, Dick and Harry may not be adapted to the work. Bankers, like all other successful business and professional men, are "born, not made." There is about as much sense in this postal bank theory as there is in the proposition to have the government maintain a department store in every town.

HOTHEADS ARE POOR LEADERS.

History has demonstrated a countless number of times, that hot heads are poor leaders. All is fair in love and war, and hot heads, who act on the spur of the moment, may succeed when the battle is on, as minor mistakes may be buried under general results. But in time of peace, minor mistakes count in a greater degree. Therefore, the administration is wise in refusing to take the advice of the jungoes, and go to war before there is reason to shed blood.

Up to date there is no real indication that the horror in Havana harbor was anything but an accident. True, plenty of people are certain that the Spaniards wrecked the boat and plenty of wiseacres say "I told you so," but no one KNOWS anything about how the accident occured. Individuals may act on a mere belief, but a nation cannot. When the administration has positive knowledge of what happened to the Maine, proper action will be taken. In the mean time it is plainly shown that Prtsident McKinley will not be stampeded by shouters who howl for "national honor," etc., but whose chief occupation, in case of war, would probably be the selling of supplies to the government at a good round price.

SIGSBEE IS FIRM.

Captain Sigsbee is firm in his statement that the Spaniards will not be allowed to examine the hull of the Maine until after Uncle Sam gets through, and in this position, the administration backs him up.

As long as Uncle Sam owns the ship, or what there is left of it, he certainly ought to make his own "post mortem" first if he wishes and Captain Sigsbee is, of course, the man to direct the work.

If the Spaniards want to look it over afterward, well and good, but they ought not to expect to make the first inspection, and it is proper that they should not be allowed to do so.

By appointing W. C. Silverthorn circuit judge to succeed Judge Bardeen Governor Scofield has demonstrated that he is not a narrow partisan, but a broad minded man who believes that the judiciary should be free from partisanship, and, what is better still—acts on that belief.

Senator Billy Mason should be provided with an air pump and a quick repair outfit. A puncture would be a serious matter in his case.

The Milwaukee Street Railway Co. will spend a million dollars for improvements this summer, its business the past year having been the largest in its history. What better evidence could be had that prosperity has reached the Cream City?

Now that a girl burglar has been caught at Milwaukee, Cream City women who look under their beds for burglars every night will probably let their finger nails grow so as to be well equipped for scratching and hair pulling.

Judge Sutherland, of Milwaukee, has declared the plumbing law invalid—its "joints" so to speak, not having been properly "wiped."

And in closing it may be said that there is no indication that Billy would retist.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Color Schemes For Interior Decoration. Homemade Photograph Frames. Whole Pea Soup.

It is an unfortunate fact, yet a fact none the less, that a large proportion of mankind are what is termed color blind and a still larger proportion do not understand color. That is, they may be able to distinguish one color from another, but they are entirely ignorant of the art of arranging and adapting the various tones in order to get a desired effect. To a certain extent this can be learned by constant association with colors, very careful observation and a little experimenting with them.

Before deciding upon any particular scheme of color for a room it is wise to consider the surroundings and their style, as, for instance, heavy oak furniture must not have a background of weak coloring, while lightly made designs, such as Sheraton and the various French styles, would look absurd among heavy shades. Appropriateness must ever be the keynote. In the hall, which often has to rely principally upon the coloring, the warm tones of red, golden brown, dark blue and copper are all very suitable, being what is called good furnishing colors, and these again look well in the dining room, where green and plum color may also be added to their number. Terra cotta is also a good color, as it stands well in addition to being both warm looking and bright.

The library requires subdued coloring, but not so much so as to be gloomy. Brown, gold, royal blue and sage green are all appropriate, and, again, cedar wood color can be used with most satisfactory result.

In the drawing room the lighter and more delicate tones of coloring can be introduced, and greater variety is permissible, although as a general rule it is preferable to keep to the different shades of one color rather than use contrasts, as the harmony is more restful to the eye. Rose color, pink, yellow, pale green and blue can be used effectively and certain shades of sage green if the room has a sunny aspect, but too much green is liable to be depressing and should always be relieved by a touch of brighter color.

For bedrooms the colors must be cheerful, such as cream, yellow, pink, blue and fawn, and all colors should be seen by artificial light as well as by sunlight before being finally decided upon, the difference in their effect being hardly credible. Some of them very readily catch reflections and have a totally different effect from the one intended, and all these things are to be considered in the manipulation of colors.

Valentine Cake.

The ingredients required are 2 pounds of butter, 2 pounds of flour, a pound of castor sugar, half a pound of sweet almonds, the same quantity of dried cherries and candied citron, the yolks of 6 eggs and the whites of 8 and a little orange flower water. Beat the butter to a cream, sifting in the castor sugar, add then the yolks of the eggs thoroughly beaten with the orange flower water, dredge in half the flour, then put in the cherries, each cut in half, together with the citron and almonds finely chopped. Beat up the whites of the eggs to a very stiff froth and add to the mixture, dredge in the rest of the flour and beat well for 15 minutes. Then procure a heart shaped mold, grease and line also with thick buttered paper, pour in the cake mixture and bake in a moderate oven for an hour and a half. When done, allow to stand for 30 minutes, placing it upon a sieve, and when quite cold ice the top thickly with a good almond icing, with dried cherries set all round the edge. Let this set, and then ornament the top with small sugar Cupids and doves, which can be purchased at any good confectioner's.

"I wish I had a voice which could be heard throughout the length and breadth of this continent, that I might speak to the army of sufferers who are being tortured by the disease with which I have been afflicted for years. I have been an intense sufferer for several years, and everyone who has had that disease knows the extreme agony I must have endured. Itching burning, scratching, digging and loss of sleep has been my deplorable condition. Four of our best physicians had exhausted their energies on my case, without even giving me relief. Oh, what a godsend to me when one of our druggists called my attention to that wonderful remedy Septicide, and assured me that it would do what skillful hands had completely failed in doing. Suffice it to say that two bottles cured me completely, so there is no return of this dreadful complaint. N. FARNHAM.

SEVEREST STORM OF A HARD WINTER

RAILWAYS AND HIGHWAYS BLOCKED BY SNOW.

All Trains Reach the City Several Hours Behind Time—Engines Stalled in the Drifts—Gangs of Men Busy Clearing the Tracks All Day.

The year 1898 will go down in history as one noted for snow storms and blizzards. The oldest inhabitants cannot recall the time when such disturbances came so thick and fast. Of the three late blizzards that have visited this section of the state none proved as severe as the storm of Saturday and yesterday. Not only was the storm itself severe, but the length of time it prevailed was most prolonged and for twenty-four hours there was no let up to its fury. On Saturday the fun started, and although the amount of snow fall was not noteworthy the strong winds from the north made the day as well as night most disagreeable.

A Stormy Sunday

Sunday morning the inhabitants awoke to find a storm of large proportions in progress. Throughout the entire morning, what proved to be one of the worst blizzards of the season raged at a furious rate, blocking travel of all kinds and making walking almost impossible. The churches in the city were all poorly attended, and in the evening several abandoned services for the reason that no one was there to participate in them. Certain milk peddlers were obliged, for the first time in years, to abandon their milk routes till the fury of the storm had abated. Two local teachers who preside over schools in the town of Harmony were obliged to give up the idea of making the trip back this morning on account of the bad condition of the roads.

Hindrances on the Railroads.

But it was the railroads and the traveling public that were made to suffer. On the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road traffic was blocked on every branch in and out of the city, with the single exception of the Madison division. On the prairie road between Whitewater and Milwaukee, the trains were obliged to fight against big odds. The Milwaukee passenger pulled into the local yards this morning forty-five minutes late, in spite of the fact that two engines were attached. The Mineral Point passenger was two hours behind regular time, while the Rockford passenger was but twenty minutes late. No effort was made to run freight trains.

On the Chicago & Northwestean road an equal amount of trouble, if not more, was experienced. Prior to the arrival of the 7:20 passenger from St. Paul last night two engines with snow plows attached were sent four miles south of this city to break the way. On entering high drifts near the Reed farm both engines found themselves stuck fast unable to move either way. The 7:20 train on its arrival was sent to Chicago via Belvidere, Ill. At 8 o'clock last evening three single engines were sent south to rescue the two imprisoned engines and they, soon found themselves stalled, where they remained all night. A special train in charge of Conductor J. F. Brown went to tee rescue this morning with thirty men each supplied with a shovel.

Behind Time

The Janesville-Chicago accommodation on her arrival nere this morning was ordered abandoned. The Chicago paper train, due here at 6:25 this morning, did not arrive till after the noon hour. Railroad men ray the storm of ye terday is the worst one in years.

Clearing Streets of Snow

Street Commissioner Palmer put a force of men at work this morning clearing Milwaukee street, from Main to River streets, of snow and ice. Two large snow plows with teams attached were set to work gathering up and placing the drifts of snow on the north side of the Milwaukee street bridge where a gang of men lost no time in shoveling it into the river. In this manner several tons of the beautiful was removed.

At four o'clock this afternoon word was received that the newspaper train from Chicago on the Northwester road was stuck in a six foot snow bank near Woodstock, and that it was impossible for it to move.

The Chicago-Green Bay passenger train, due in Janesville at 12:45, was in the snow bank at a late hour this afternoon at Woodstock.

From Winona this afternoon there arrived a monstrous engine with rotary snow plow attached which is the first of its kind seen in this section. It was placed at work south of this city, and judging from the way it threw the snow high in the air it will not take long before traffic is again resumed.

The noon passenger train from Green Bay, on its arrival in this city, was immediately ordered back to Green Bay to cover the route that should have been traveled by the Chicago-Green Bay train.

Storm Drifts

The conduct of the coming war with Spain formed the topic of discussion in the hotel offices on Sunday, and the haughty Caslilian was soundly trounced in a score of styles during the day. The possibility of getting whipped did not seem to enter into the calculations of any of the patriots engaged in the discussions.

Even this unprecedented storm should not tempt the good citizen to forget that the immortal George couldn't tell a lie, even regarding the weather they had 'way back in the early days.

Several hundred laborers equipped with shovels are making the snow fly in the railroad yards. There is no serious impediment to the movement of trains in this region.

The roads leading to Janesville from every quarter are blockaded with drifts, and farmers have postponed their visits to some more convenient season.

Strangers were conspicuous in the hotels yesterday by reason of their absence. Trains were behind time, and their quota of passengers was light.

The men who have not cleared away the snow from their walks are receiving a liberal share of left-handed blessings today.

Tomorrow brings a national holiday and all the public offices and courts of the city will be closed.

Washington's birthday will be celebrated among scenes remindful of Valley Forge and the crossing of the Delaware.

Wheels have gone out of fashion, and all the world's aglide upon runners.

There were many empty pews in the churches yesterday.

THE Rev. W. Parry Thomas, who had some exercise in England in the Boys' Brigade movement has kindly consented to address the Christ Church Cadets soon.

THE Cliosophic club will meet with Miss Nettie Harrington, 110 Madison street. The subject will be "The Episcopal Church." Miss Margaret Woodruff will lead.

ASK some of your friends if you have never attended one, what they thing of the Concordia masquerade. The answer is always the same—the greatest event of the season.

THE annual service of Christ church cadets was postponed on account of the storm. It will be held next Sunday night. Tomorrow being a holiday the cadets will not drill.

WE are selling a great many of those oranges at ten cents a dozen, and they are certainly very choice for the money. We have oranges up as high as 45 cents a dozen to fit any taste or pocket. Sanbern.

MRS. G. W. BEMIS has erected a handsome monument on the Bemis family lot in Oak Hill. On it are inscribed the names of her father, mother and husband. The monument is of Quincy granite and is of impressive design.

THE closing entertainment in the People's Lecture course comes tomorrow night, and Bishop John H. Vincent of Chatauqua fame, is the attraction. The day being Washington's birthday, the management have arranged with the Y. M. C. A. band to give a half-hour concert, commencing at 7:30, of patriotic music. This will prove an added attraction, and will be appreciated by the patrons of the course.

WAS NOT JACK HESS THE POLICE SAY

FARGO CHIEF ADMITS HIS MISTAKE.

Photograph Was Sent Him and He Said at Once That the Tramp He Had In Limbo Was Not the Janesville Jail Breaker But a Common Hobo.

Jack Hess is still at large.

He is not in jail at Fargo, North Dakota, as was supposed to be the case three days ago. Chief of Police Howland, of Fargo, notified Sheriff Acheson yesterday that if he was to judge from the photograph sent him he was quite positive that he had missed his guess when he detained a man that he supposed was the celebrated Janesville jail breaker. The man was a "wandering Willie" who was taken up by the Fargo police for vagrancy. He was given three days in jail. It was during this space of time that Chief Howland thought that he had landed the much wanted Janesville boy. So the police throughout the country can still keep on looking for Mr. Hess and his pal, Saunders.

"Jimmy" May Know.

When James Hess and pals, who are now in jail at Racine, arrive in Janesville, the local police believe that they may throw some light on the whereabouts of Hess and Saunders. James Hess is a brother of Jack's and there is little doubt but what since the escape of Jack from the Rock county bastile he and his brother have been in communication. But to get James to tell tales out of school is an entirely different question, and there is little doubt but what he will keep as mum about the matter as it is possible. Still he may be induced to tell.

Sheriff Acheson said that the outcome of the present matter was no more than what he expected, and that he would have been surprised to find that the Fargo man was Hess.

CADETS COMPETE FOR PRIZES

Essays and Declamations Will Win Cash For Winners.

HUBBS GAVE FINE LECTURE

Members of the Y. M. C. A. Pleased With His Visit

In spite of the inclement weather an audience of about fifty greeted George C. Hubbs, of Madison at the Y. M. C. A. building yesterday afternoon. And all were well repaid for their trouble in coming out in such a storm. Mr. Hubbs, who took for his subject, "What Is a Young Man Worth?" handled it from beginning to end in such a way as to leave no doubt in the minds of those present that the speaker was well posted on just what is needed to make up a young man of the pure, business like, and christian kind.

At the close of his remarks those present extended Mr. Hubbs a vote of thanks, and all expressed the wish that he might again visit the Bower City at a time when the conditions of the weather were more favorable.

Mr. Hubbs is connected with the State Journal, Should he again pay the local association a visit, his reception will be a hearty one.

DANGER IN SODA.

Serious Results Sometimes Follow Its Excessive Use.

Common soda is all right in its place and indispensable in the kitchen and for cooking and washing purposes, but it was never intended for medicine, and people who use it as such will some day regret it.

We refer to the common use of soda to relieve heartburn or sour stomach, a habit which thousands of people practice almost daily, and one which is fraught with danger; moreover the soda only gives temporary relief and in the end the stomach trouble gets worse and worse.

The soda acts as a mechanical irritant to the walls of the stomach and bowels and cases are on record where it accumulated in the intestines, causing death by inflammation or peritonitis.

Dr. Harlandson recommends as the safest and surest cure for sour stomach (acid dyspepsia) an excellent preparation sold by druggists under the name of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These tablets are large 20 grain lozenges, very pleasant to taste and contain the natural acids, peptones, and digestive elements essential to good digestion, and when taken after meals they digest the food perfectly and promptly before it has time to ferment, sour and poison the blood and nervous system.

Dr. Wuerth states that he invariably uses Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach derangements and finds them a certain cure not only for sour stomach, but by promptly digesting the food they create a healthy appetite, increase flesh and strengthen the action of the heart and liver. They are not a cathartic, but intended only for stomach diseases and weakness and will be found reliable in any stomach trouble except cancer of the stomach.

All druggists sell Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at 50 cts. per package.

COUNCIL IS TO ACT IN M'LELLAN CASE

MATTER WILL BE DISPOSED OF TONIGHT.

Aldermen Think They Have Things All In City's Favor and Will Revoke the License Tonight—Attorney Wheeler Looks Up the Records In the Case.

This evening the common council will meet, and it is the intention to suppress the Alexander McLellan saloon at No. 4 South River street.

Mayor Thoroughgood has been notified that the majority of the city fathers will be on hand, no matter how severe the weather may be.

"I believe the council will wind up the last act in the drama this evening," said one of the aldermen this noon. "We have everything on our side now."

Mr. McLellan, when seen this morning, would say nothing. Attorney W. G. Wheeler who appears in Mr. McLellan's behalf, was busy this morning in the office of the city clerk carefully looking over the records of the council meetings at which the McLellan matter was brought up. Just what move Attorney Wheeler will then make is a matter of much speculation.

No other business of importance is scheduled to come before the meeting tonight. The application for a transfer of the saloon license of Ludden & Kilmer to H W. Bliss will be acted upon, however.

A MAGIC SNUFFBOX.

Somewhere in the writings of the late Robert Louis Stevenson allusion is made to "the quaint highland legend of the magic snuffbox." Stevenson never told the story in full, however, and it remains to most people as tantalizing as that other untold legend, the tale of "Old Grouse In the Gunroom," in "She Stoops to Conquer."

Now when the writer last went "over the sea to Skye" he heard this very "legend of the snuffbox," told much as follows:

In the old days there dwelt in one of the Hebridean islands a worthy man named Ian Dhu McGillaspick. The name of his little farm, which he held in rentage from the McDonald himself, was Carnmore-na-tubberbrandan — a good long name, you must admit, and signifying in the English tongue "the big cairn of the well of St. Brandan."

One day Ian Dhu McGillaspick was going down to the shore to take his boat for a voyage to Oban, no less, when, chancing to pass by the well, he encountered a grave, gray haired gentleman, who saluted him with dignity and inquired his name. On being told of Ian's identity the stranger said:

"In me you behold St. Brandan. Pleased am I to observe the manner in which you have kept my well, and to show my gratitude I will grant you a boon. * * * I believe, Ian Dhu, that you like snuff?"

Ian's eyes glistened. Snuff was indeed a favorite luxury of his. Then the saint took from his girdle a handsome snuffbox of oak, full to the top of fragrant, titillating mixture.

"Take this magic box, Ian," said he. "So long as you keep the lid hospitably open the box will remain filled to the brim no matter how many people take pinches out of it. But once close the lid inhospitably, and every grain of snuff shall disappear from within it."

With these words the saint laid the open box in Ian's hands and vanished.

Ian tried the snuff and found it excellent. Overjoyed, he hastened down to the beach where his boat lay and offered his gift to the fishermen. One after another they tested the snuff. But just as fast as one pinch was taken from the magic box another appeared in its place.

Thereafter Ian Dhu McGillaspick prospered and grew richer every day. Presently he was almost looked upon as a laird. Ian, quite properly, ascribed every bit of this remarkable good fortune to the snuffbox. Above all, you may feel assured that he never closed the lid of the box.

It happened about this time that a new lord of the isles came to rule over the dominions of the McDonalds, and hearing of Ian Dhu's rise in the world he determined to pay him a visit, as great chieftains did by way of honoring the better sort of their vassals and clansmen.

Ian Dhu was there to welcome him, and in his outstretched hand, invitingly open, was St. Brandan's snuffbox, still full to the brim.

Unfortunately this lord of the isles had been brought up in France, in which country it was a matter of etiquette to pass the snuffbox closed to a superior. The chieftain was a haughty man, and, seeing what he believed to be an insult, he cried out fiercely to poor Ian Dhu: "You rascal! Do you dare to affront me?" Then before the astonished Ian could get his breath to explain the lord of the isles sprung forward and snatching the open snuffbox closed the lid.

Ian uttered a cry and tried to recover his talisman, but all to late. When the proud chief opened the box, he found not one single grain of snuff within. St. Brandan's promise had been fulfilled—the closing of the magic snuffbox had caused the disappearance of the magic snuff. Then was the lord of the isles more wrath than ever, believing that Ian Dhu had played some cunning trick.

Ian Dhu was tied hand and foot outside his own door, without even a pinch of snuff to comfort him, while the lord of the isles and his following finished the feast he had prepared.

But just as the unfortunate man had given up all hope who should appear before him but that very same St. Brandan, who had given him the box.

"Never fear, Ian Dhu," said the good saint. "It was not your fault that the lid was closed."

Quickly he cut Ian's bonds, removed his gag and bade him hasten before the lord of the isles once more. Into the presence of the chief Ian hurried and, throwing himself on his knees, made known the entire story.

At first the chief scoffed, but on inquiry, finding that the tales told about the snuffbox's capacity were indeed marvelous, he began to believe. Feeling full of remorse for having deprived Ian Dhu of his magic snuff, he resolved to make reparation.

"My friend," he said to Ian, "I will make a bargain with you. This snuffbox is of no further use to you, but I should like to preserve it as a relic of the excellent St. Brandan. Give it to me, therefore, and in return I shall present to you free of rent forever all the lands which you now hold as my tenant."

Ian Dhu gladly accepted this offer. With the grant of land he became laird, and his descendants to this very day dwell in peace and comfort at Cairnmore-na-tubberbrandan. — Pittsburg Leader.

Hog Oysters.

SCHEME TO BEAT CUPID.

Advanced Theories Propounded by the Pastor of an Eastern Church.

It may be that Rev. Dr. Chamberlain of the First Congregational church, Newark, N. J., is sincere in the project which he has in hand, but not a few of his congregation are of the opinion that he has simply brought it to public notice as a means of drawing more attention to himself than he has hitherto enjoyed. Dr. Chamberlain believes that courtship can be reduced to an exact science, with none of the haphazard features which too often characterize it. He laughs derisively when reminded that poets have in all ages alleged that love is not a matter that can be ruled and regulated. "Courtship," says this reverend foe of Cupid, "should be a matter governed by science and deliberation. I have as much respect for a fellow who 'falls in love' as I have for a man who falls into a ditch. Love should never be considered in carrying on a courtship, but after the courtship has been conducted on purely common-sense grounds and marriage has taken place there will arise, slowly but surely, a new dignified sentiment which will last all through life and guarantee a lifetime of continual happiness. This is what love is and always should be. Courtship should be one of the most dignified sciences of life, as well as the most delicate. It should be placed on the same level and treated in as thorough a business manner as we select some profession or enter some line of mercantile work. When a young man desires to marry he should acquaint his family of his wish, and they should set about to find some marriageable girl a little younger than himself, who is free from any physical deformity and who has been accustomed to only such a social life as the young man's probable income will allow her to lead. The couple should then devote a number of months to cultivating each other's society. I wish we could have a code of ethics brought into general recognition which would make it absolutely necessary for every candidate for matrimony to exhibit to the parents of the opposite party a certificate signed by two reputable physicians showing that the holder is entirely free from every kind of communicable disease or any affliction which might be transmitted to posterity. Dr. Chamberlain's notions about love and courtship are scorned by all the younger members of his congregation. Not a few of the elders are also inclined to pooh-pooh the pastor's ideas, and altogether the pastor seems to be in for a period during which his enjoyment will be in inverse ratio to what he doubtless regards as his deserts.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Home Decorations Practicable For Amateur Hands.

Chairs, tables and stools of hard wood which have been stained and defaced beyond the power of furniture polish to restore them may be made presentable again by being treated with enamel paint, either light or dark. It is, of course, always indadvisable to cover hard wood articles with anything which is opaque and conceals the grain, so where a coat of varnish will suffice to renew their attractiveness paint should not be used. It sometimes happens, however, that old furniture of a graceful shape and still strong has been injured and discolored to such an extent that varnish will not remove or conceal the disfigurement. In that case enamel is the only resort, and, as enameled furniture is much in vogue at present, the result is often surprisingly good. The cane seats of chairs may be enameled just as the frame is, but it should be remembered that one or two coats of ordinary paint of the desired color should be applied and the enamel only used as a finish, as thick enamel cracks and chips off. White, ivory, pale green, dark red, dark green, brown and black are the favorite colors. Loose cushions of flowered silk, fastened with ribbons, are appropriate for chairs thus treated. Rattan furniture as well as that made of wood takes paint and enamel very satisfactorily.

Small marquise parasols may be converted into very pretty umbrella shades for tall lamps. The handle of the parasol is removed, and a hole is cut in the top to allow of the passage of the lamp chimney. The parasol is sustained by a wire frame such as is used for paper lamp shades, and a ruche is arranged around the opening at the top, a ruffle to match being placed around the outer edge.

The first picture shows a workbasket of gilded straw, embroidered with flowers in silk and edged with a gold cord. The lining is of pink silk, with a gold drawing string. The second picture shows a willow wastebasket, also gilded and laced with pink and green ribbons. The lining is of pink silk, and around the base of the basket is a band of green silk embroidered with pink.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

MIDDLE AGED WOMEN.

How They May Dress Fashionably, Appropriately and Becomingly.

Times change, and we change with them. There is now no age at which a woman may conscientiously say: "I am too old to give attention to my dress. Nobody notices or cares how I look, so long as I am neat and respectable in appearance, and I need give no thought to my wardrobe beyond providing myself with the necessities." Middle aged and elderly women are more particular as to their clothing and dress more expensively than do young ones. With the passing of early youth they no longer are relegated to obscurity, but take an even more active part in social and public life than they did when younger, and find it increasingly incumbent upon them to appear in dignified and becoming attire.

Rich materials are for their especial use, simpler goods being in good taste for young women and girls. Fine soft cloth, rich silk and wool goods, magnificent brocades, plushes and velvets are all appropriate to the stateliness of maturity, and the striking feature of an elderly woman's costume should be the excellence of the fabric and the carefulness of the making rather than the elaboration of the trimming. The decoration should be of a reserved and sober character, but whatever trimming is employed should be of the best of its kind—buttons, lace, passementerie or velvet.

The coiffure should be in the prevailing style, but less pronounced, less bouffant and smoother than is seen for young women. The round hat is not admissible for winter, although in summer a straw hat may be worn of a quiet shape and quietly trimmed. Plain veils in black, white or gray or veils with a small dot are appropriate. As for gloves, shoes, petticoats and underwear, there is no distinction necessary between youth and maturity. What is in good taste for one is in equally good taste for the other.

The picture shows a costume of black velvet, having a trained skirt which opens at the left side, where it is ornamented with a plaiting of black mousseline de soie, with brandebourgs of black jet. Jet embroidery also adorns the tablier. The front of the bodice is gathered obliquely into the belt and closes at the left side with square tabs bordered with a plaiting of mousseline. Jet motifs form the trimming. Nile green velvet composes the collar and toque, the latter being trimmed with black plumes and a jeweled buckle.

The Presumpscot (Maine) river, though small in size, is remarkable for the large number of lakes which supply it and for the proportion of its basin taken up by lake surface. There are 45 of these lakes, with an area of 97 square miles.

Bishop McKin, the Episcopal prelate of Tokyo, says that of a total of 150,000 converts in Japan the Roman Catholics are first, with about 50,000, and the Greek Catholics second, with 23,000. The Episcopalians number in the neighborhood of 10,000.

Among numismatics one of the most sought after colonial coins is the Highly copper. They are of several varieties and were struck in 1737 by Samuel Highly, who was a physician and a blacksmith at Granby, Conn. He obtained the copper from a mine near by and shaped the coins at his forge.

On a stone of the temple of "Wingless Victory," on the Acropolis, at Athens, an inscription has been found stating that the monument was built by Kallicrates, who was one of the architects of the Parthenon at the beginning of Pericles' government. This fixes its date at about 450 years before Christ.

CHILD LOVE.

Munyon Tightens Home Ties.

He Brings Repose and Relief to Mothers Mind.

Can children love their parents too much? The little ones look to their father and mother for food and shelter and for wisdom and example. The sense of dependence and gratitude is the foundation of childish love. How happy are parents who can make their children look to them also for relief from pain and danger from disease! Munyon has made a special study of the diseases of children and has prepared specifics for fevers, croup, cholera morbus, diarrhœas, coughs, colds, sore throats, worms and other childhood maladies. Mothers should keep all these remedies in the house for protection against emergencies. Time is everything in doctoring children. A few doses of the proper remedy, given at the right time will prevent long and dangerous spells of illness, and save many a dollar in doctor's fees.

Munyon's Homœopathic Home Remedy Company compound a separate specific for each disease. They are for sale by druggists, mostly for 25 cents each. Personal letters to Professor Munyon, 1505 Arch street. Philadelphia, Pa., are answered with free medical advice for any disease.

THE SPORTING WORLD.

Dr. Anderson of Yale says: "There is no doubt in the minds of intelligent educators as to the great value of physical training. The movement on the part of our college faculties in permitting time and money to be spent on the care of the body proves as much. The difficulty lies not in getting educators to agree as to the importance of systematic training, but in securing instructors. There is a constant call for energetic, wide awake college graduates to take charge of the gymnasiums in many of our institutions of learning. As soon as the colleges pay more attention to the teaching of gymnastics as a part of a graduate's education we shall advance rapidly. Yale has already taken this step in organizing elective and physical education. A regular course is offered to the members of the junior and senior classes in the science of physical training. This course counts as two hours. Harvard is agitating the question. Oberlin, Cornell, Leland Stanford and several other universities already have courses. We hope the day is not far distant when the work done by the freshmen will count on their regular standing. Investigation and research on the relation of mind to body show that the physical basis of mental activity is decidedly important and that a man can only do his best work when the body is kept in fine condition."

feated George Tincler, the Irish runner, in a half mile race for $500. Kilpatrick won by three yards in 1m. 57 1-5s. In 1894, 1895 and 1896 Kilpatrick was the amateur champion half mile runner of America. He has since become a professional.

Yale's New Stroke.

Bob Cook thinks that he has found the Yale stroke for this year. The man is William Biddle Williams. He is from Haverford, Pa., and comes of the Biddles of Revolutionary fame. He stroked the Yale freshman crew last year and has stroked the varsity in most of the tank practice this fall. The selection of Williams for stroke means a radical change from the balancing of the shell last year. Langford was a heavy oarsman, tipping the scales at about 175 pounds in the Cornell-Harvard race last year. Williams is a rather slender little fellow, weighing only about 155 pounds, and of exactly the opposite build. Briggs, who stroked last year's Cornell eight, only weighed 134 pounds. Williams is away in the lead over his rivals for the place.—New York Sun.

Langtry May Race In America.

Mrs. Langtry, who races in England under the name of Mr. Jersey, may ship her stable to this country next year and try her luck on the tracks in and about New York. Mrs. Langtry has planned a great season on the English tracks for the present year. She has paid a big price for the Australian horse Aurum, which she has entered liberally in the big stakes. Aurum won the Victoria Derby and ran third in the famous Melbourne Cup. Mrs. Langtry has entered her Cesarewitch winner Merman in a number of stakes. Her stable will be one of the strongest in England. Her coming would create a sensation on the American turf.—New York Mail and Express.

Different Athletic Customs.

Under the present condition of affairs in England and the United States it is impossible for a correct comparison of athletic records. In America the track is measured 18 inches from the curb, while 12 inches is the rule in England. The British weight throwers get up their momentum in a nine foot circle. The athletes of the United States are restricted to seven feet. The English run over hurdles fixed firmly in the ground, which is much more dangerous to the competitors than the lightly constructed and loose hurdles used in the United States.--New York Sun.

Ski-ing a Social Fad.

Ski-ing is the latest fad among society people who spend some part of the winter in the country. Ski-ing is skating with elongated skates and trying to keep one's equilibrium while dashing down a hillside at the rate of 40 miles an hour.

In Norway, the home of the ski, the people employ the native skate, either from necessity where snow lies deep and roads are few and far between or for pleasure in the more frequented districts. In America ski running has long been popular in Minnesota.—Exchange.

Golf Legally Defined.

Just before the rising of the law courts a case involving the playing of golf was heard, and a queen's counsel engaged in it thus described for the instruction of the judge the ancient and royal game: "I believe, my lord, that the game of golf is played in irregular fields or waste grounds with a small ball which the player tries to hit with a stick. If he succeeds in hitting the ball, he spends the remainder of the day in looking for it. That, as I am informed, my lord, is the game of golf."—London Telegraph.

QUITS.

Said a young and tactless husband
To his inexperienced wife,
"If you would but give up leading
Such a fashionable life
And devote more time to cooking—
How to mix and when to bake—
Then perhaps you might make pastry
Such as mother used to make."

And the wife, resenting, answered
(For the worm will turn, you know),
"If you would but give up horses
And a score of clubs or so
To devote more time to business—
When to buy and what to stake—
Then perhaps you might make money
Such as father used to make."
—Brooklyn Life.

Too Much Decoration.

"To be out of fashion is to be out of the world" is a saying which it is difficult to overcome, to the satisfaction of the girl who wishes to present an up to date appearance, and we do not blame our girls for having a desire to be apace with the times in their costumes. However, we regret that the ladies of the present time are obliged to festoon their heads with such an abundance of decorations that the beholder is puzzled in his attempts at distinguishing the handiwork of nature among the profusion of millinery. It seems to us that this artificial array is a piece of useless extravagance, and we would ask the fair sex to consider how impossible it is for them to add anything that can be ornamental to what is already the masterpiece of nature.

The head has the most beautiful appearance, as well as the highest station, in a human figure. Nature has laid out all her art in beautifying the face, she has touched it with vermilion, planted in it a double row of ivory, made it the seat of smiles and blushes, lighted it up and enlivened it with the brightness of the eyes, given it airs and graces that cannot be described and surrounded it with such a flowing shade of hair as sets all its beauties in the most agreeable light. In short, she seems to have designed the head as the cupola to the most glorious of her works, and when we load it with such a pile of supernumerary ornaments we destroy the symmetry of the human figure and foolishly contrive to call off the eye from great and real beauties to childish gewgaws.—New York Ledger.

Lincoln's Gift to a Little Girl.

Mrs. George B. Smith of Russell county is the proud owner of a string of beads presented to her by Abraham Lincoln. She was a schoolgirl at New Salem, Ills., at the time Lincoln was running a store there, and one day her teacher sent her to Lincoln's well to get a bucket of water. "Please, Mr. Lincoln, may I get a bucket of water?" said she to the tall young storekeeper. "Of course you may," responded Lincoln. "I thank you ever so much," said the little girl, with a courtesy. "You are the politest little girl I ever saw," said Lincoln, with a smile. "Come into the store and I will give you a present." And this is how Mrs. Smith came into possession of her string of beads.—Kansas City Journal.
